INTRODUCTION.

The fine collection described in the following pages is the property of a gentleman widely and favorably known among the coin collectors of the United States, and is worthy of the attention of American collectors, because the great majority of pieces possess the two desirable attributes of rarity and fine preservation. The collection is one essentially representative of the various modern coinages, and the specimens have been selected with such care that there is not, in fact, among the silver pieces, a coin illegible or unworthy to figure in a good cabinet. The extremely fine distinctions between good, uncirculated and proof coins, of late drawn by collectors generally, and the higher value set by them upon coins of superior preservation, have been constantly before my mind while cataloguing, but the uniform fine preservation of the pieces has enabled me to overcome this stumbling-block with greater ease than I had apprehended, and to avoid, I hope, the mistakes made by several of my confreres of allowing their admiration for a rare piece to bias their judgment when describing its actual preservation. It is not deemed necessary to give any special outline of the collection, yet I may be pardoned for referring to the first coinages of South American Republics, the U. S. series in gold and silver, the Swedish and Polish coins, the Reformation coins and medals, and in general to the German crowns of the 16th and 17th centuries, as being particularly worthy of the attention of our best collectors.
